OVERVIEW

Project Managers or people involved in project management typically have one of the most adrenaline-rushing jobs, especially since their daily tasks require them to work closely with many individuals across different ranks and departments, whilst ensuring the accurate flow of information across all stakeholders.

More often than not, they are expected to be able to juggle their job responsibilities and adhere to the timeline and budget specified. Adding on managing different personalities and tantrums of people together, these mixes make the job of people in the Project Management world much more unique in terms of its challenges.

The modules in this workshop focuses on two aspects:

- Managing the mind-set of the Project Manager himself / herself
- Managing the various personalities they deal with during each phase of the project.

This workshop's differentiation factor from among others is the incorporation of Neuro-Linguistic-Programming (NLP) techniques which will help Project Managers bring out the best in themselves, as well as their teams. In today's corporate world, the distinction between an average and a brilliant personality is communication through well-programmed language. These skills, once mastered, are an effective tool which help organisations increase the quality of their people and subsequently, create solid professional relationships.

OUTCOMES AND BENEFITS

By attending this workshop, participants will be better equipped to:

- Take charge of your mind and your life
- Regain personal power and take control over any situation by choosing the right attitude and response
- Reframe your problems and issues during different project phase and the ability to come up with constructive solutions
- Exhibit a strong, capable, professional and inspirational presence
- Create a powerful identity with tailor-made values and beliefs
- Create a change at subconscious level
- Conscious of the usage of your language as it has a direct impact on the project's outcome
- The ability in using the right language patterns to influence and create a desired result
